A SAFE THAT IS VERY REVEALING: THE GALLERY BY DÖTTLING

Something that has always been the case about safes produced by the Döttling manufactory: Once the door is closed, the precious items inside are stylishly protected from unauthorized access, but they cannot be admired.

The latest luxury safe from the Sindelfingen-based safe manufactory – The Gallery – lives up to its name, ensuring that treasures no longer have to shine in secret. Its door, made of bulletproof glass, offers a view inside at all times – without any loss in security whatsoever.

Simply uncompromising. And not just in terms of functionality, but also quality and design.

A first glance at The Gallery reveals: Its design with high-gloss nickel fittings and sides covered in the finest calfskin is closely aligned to The Bel-Air safe range, reflecting the timelessly elegant appearance of overseas travel cases from the Roaring Twenties.

With one major difference. We've designed the door in such a way that we could integrate a bulletproof, 30-mm-thick armored glass window, which allows a clear view of the treasures inside, even when closed.

This safe is a real tour de force from the Döttling technicians, as the bolt work had to be mounted within a very confined space around the glass without even remotely compromising security. Another technical highlight that specifically reflects Döttling's attention to detail: The bulletproof glass window can be switched from transparent to opaque by remote control.

The interior of The Gallery, lined with the finest Alcantara leather, features 24 precision watch winders – protected by a Döttling fingerprint high-security lock – which can optionally be equipped with innovative Touch & Move technology.

There are also four drawers with black-stained Japanese Tamo Ash veneers, an extendable table, and four secret compartments. Seventeen infinitely dimmable LED spotlights impressively stage the treasures inside.
